I have known you for twenty-five years," went on Karl Steinmetz, "and I cannot say that I know any good of you. Let that pass. It is not, I suppose, my business. The world is as the good God made it. I can do nothing toward bettering it. I have always known you to be a scoundrel, a fact to be deplored, and that is all. But so soon as your villainy affects my own life, then, my friend, a more active recognition of it is necessary."

"Indeed," sneered the Frenchman, "your villainy has touched Paul's life, and at that point it touches mine," continued Karl Steinmetz, with slow anger, "you followed us to Petersburg; thence you begged us to the government of Tver. You twisted that foolish woman, the Countess Lanofitch, round your finger and obtained from her an invitation to Thors. All his in order to be near one of us. Ah! I have been watching you. Is it only after twenty-five years that I at last convince you that I am not such a fool as you are pleased to consider me?"

"You have not convinced me yet," said De Chauville, with his easy laugh.

"No, but I shall do so before I have finished with you. Now, you have not come here for nothing. It is to be near one of us. It is not Miss Delafeld. She knows you. Is it I?"

He touched his broad chest with his two hands and stood defying his life-long foe.

"Is it me that you follow? If so, I am here. Let us have done with it now."

De Chauville laughed. There was an uneasy look in his eyes. He did not quite understand Steinmetz. He made no answer, but he turned and looked at the window.

"Is it Paul?" continued Steinmetz. "I think not. I think you are afraid of Paul. Remains the princess. Unless you can convince me to the contrary I must conclude that you are trying to get a helpless woman into your power."

Steinmetz was standing with his back to what appeared to be the only exit from the room. There were two other doors concealed in the oaken panels, but De Chauville did not know that.

"I am waiting," said the German, "for you to explain your conduct."

"Indeed," replied De Chauville, "then, my friend, you will have to continue waiting. I fail to recognize your right to make inquiry into my movements. Kindly let me pass."

Steinmetz was getting calmer. There was an uneasy hush about him.

"Then I am to conclude," he said, "that you came to Russia in order to persecute a helpless woman. Her innocence or her guilt is for the moment beside the question. Neither is any business of yours. Both, on the contrary, are my affair. Innocent or guilty, the Princess Howard Alexis must from this moment be freed from your persecution."

De Chauville shrugged his shoulders. He tapped on the floor impatiently with the toe of his neat riding boot.

"Well," he said. "Let me pass."

"Your story of Sydney Bamboorough," went on Steinmetz coldly, "was a good one wherewith to frighten a panic-stricken woman. But you brought it to me. Do you suppose that I would have allowed the marriage to take place unless I knew that Bamboorough was dead?"

"You may be telling the truth about that incident or you may not," said De Chauville. "But my knowledge of the betrayal of the Charity league is sufficient for my purpose."

"Yes," admitted Steinmetz grimly, "you have information there with possibilities of mischief in it. But I shall discount most of it by telling Prince Pavlo tonight all that I know, and I know more than you do. Also, I intend to seal your lips before you leave this room."

De Chauville stared at him with a dropping lip. He gulped down something in his throat. His hand was stealing around under the fur jacket to a pocket at the back of his trousers.

"Let me out!" he hissed.

There was a gleam of bright metal in the sunlight that poured in through the window. De Chauville raised his arm sharply, and at the same instant Steinmetz threw a book in his face. A loud report, and the room was full of smoke.

Steinmetz placed one hand on the table and, despite his weight, vaulted it cleanly. This man had taken his degree at Heidelberg, and the Germans are the finest gymnasts in the world. Moreover, muscle, once made, remains till death. It was his only chance, for the Frenchman had dodged the novel, but it spoiled his aim. Steinmetz vaulted right on to him, and De Chauville staggered back.

In a moment Steinmetz had him by the collar; his face was gray, his heavy eyes ablaze. If anything will rouse a man, it is being fired at point blank at a range of four yards with a revolver.

"Ach!" gasped the German. "You would shoot me, would you?"

He wrenched the pistol from De Chauville's fingers and threw it into the corner of the room. Then he shook the man like a garment.

"First," he cried, "you would kill Paul, and now you try to shoot me! Good God, what are you? You are no man. Do you know what I am going to do with you? I am going to thrash you like a dog!"

He dragged him to the fireplace. Above the mantelpiece a stick rack was affixed to the wall, and here were sticks and riding whips. Steinmetz selected a heavy whip. His eyes were shot with blood; his mouth worked beneath his mustache.

"So," he said, "I am going to settle with you at last."

De Chauville kicked and struggled, but he could not get free. He only succeeded in half choking himself.

"You are going to swear," said Steinmetz, "never to approach the princess again, never to divulge what you know of her past life."

The Frenchman was almost blue in the face. His eyes were wild with terror.

And Karl Steinmetz thrashed him. It did not last long. No word was spoken. The silence was only broken by their shuffling feet, by the startling report of each blow, by De Chauville's repeated gasps of pain.

The fur jacket was torn in several places. The white shirt appeared here and there. In one place it was stained with red.

At last Steinmetz threw him huddled into one corner of the room. The chattering face, the wild eyes that looked up at him, were terrible to see.

"When you have promised to keep the secret you may go," said Steinmetz. "You must swear it."

De Chauville's lips moved, but no sound came from them. Steinmetz poured some water into a tumbler and gave it to him.

"It had to come to this," he said, "sooner or later. Paul would have killed you. That is the only difference. Do you swear by God in heaven above you that you will keep the princess' secret?"

"I swear it," answered De Chauville hoarsely.

Steinmetz was holding on to the back of a high chair with both hands, breathing heavily. His face was still livid. That which had been white in his eyes was quite red.

De Chauville was crawling toward the revolver in the corner of the room, but he was almost fainting. It was a question whether he would last long enough to reach the firearm. There was a bright patch of red in either liver-colored cheek. His lips were working convulsively. And Steinmetz saw him in time. He seized him by the collar of his coat and dragged him back.

He placed his foot on the pistol and faced De Chauville with glaring eyes. De Chauville rose to his feet, and for a moment the two men looked into each other's souls. The Frenchman's face was twisted with pain. No word was said.

The Frenchman went slowly toward the door. He faltered and looked round for a chair. He sat heavily down, with a little exclamation of pain and exhaustion, and felt for his pocket handkerchief.

At last the Frenchman stood slowly up and with characteristic thought of appearances fingered his torn coat.

"Have you a cloak?" asked Steinmetz.

"No."

The German went to a cupboard in the wall and selected a long riding cloak, which he handed to the Frenchman without a word.

THE CROWNING ACT

President Roosevelt Comes Into His Reward For Well Doing.

TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

In the Presence of a Vast Concurrence of His Fellow Countrymen the President Is Inaugurated.

Accepts the Highest Gift at the Bestowal of the American People.

Washington, March 4.—President Roosevelt took the oath of office today before a vast gathering of the people he has been elected to serve. The attendant scenes were not unusual. Inaugurations from the time the east front of the capitol first became the setting for the ceremony have been much the same. Many of the central figures have officiated in like capacity on other occasions when presidents have acceded to the highest office in the gift of the American people. Chief Justice Fuller, in administering the oath, repeated a solemn function he has performed four times—today his last. Yet, with all this repetition, nothing was jaded and everything appeared new.

The great crowd assembled for the crowning event of a day full of features, cannot be estimated even by comparison. It extended far beyond the reach of the voice and was so densely packed as to carry the stage out of the sight of many. The capitol plaza, resourceful in accommodating the thousands eager to view the ceremony, was completely filled. People came by its numerous streets and avenues, which, like so many yawning, ravenous maws, greedily swallowed the throng until every coign of vantage was occupied and so far away as the terraces and marble steps of the library of congress thousands stood.

Hours before the ceremony could be expected to take place the people sought the most advantageous positions. The scene was one of remarkable animation. Those who sought places maintained a running fire of raillery and pushed and jostled each other, the sound of their voices mingling with the shuffling of feet on the asphalted plaza. It was a cosmopolitan public, varied and inclusive.

Although the ceremony differed little from those that have preceded it, in the great sea of spectators probably there was a larger number of representative Americans than any inauguration has brought to Washington. The Eastern states were rivaled in point of attendance by reason of President Roosevelt's great popularity.

Delegations were present from every one of the insular possessions. Many of them had never seen the capitol and, to a large number, the inauguration of a president was wholly strange. The rendezvousing of the troops, committees and civic societies, entertained the crowd throughout the long wait incident to the schedule. The movements of the gathering troops and organizations were not all the crowd had for its entertainment. Directly in its front preparations were in progress for the inauguration itself. A monster stand in the form of an open amphitheater had been erected on a line with the rotunda of the capitol, and there decorators were engaged in arranging for the ceremony and ushers busied themselves learning the sections to be assigned to the various officials and distinguished guests. The amphitheater accommodated nearly 7,000 persons.

Some time before the beginning of the inaugural ceremony several thousand persons holding tickets entitling them to seats on the stand began to take their places. By 12:30 o'clock the human garden which had flourished in the senate and house galleries, was transplanted to the open-air amphitheater. The brilliant costumes of the women gave to the scene the finishing touch of color. Added to the acre of people seated, who looked down upon ten acres standing, were hundreds banked upon every projecting ledge of the capitol and filling the windows.

At about 1 o'clock the official party came through the main door. Cheers were sent up from the enthusiastic multitude, all eyes were directed that way and strained to get the first glimpse of the president. The official entrance was dramatic. All except those who were participating in the ceremony were seated. When the justices of the supreme court, with the exception of Chief Justice Fuller, emerged from between the Corinthian pillars and marched down the sloping carpeted aisle to their station, they were greeted with applause. Then came the members of the diplomatic corps in their gorgeous uniforms and they evoked thunderous applause. Strolling in after them came members of the cabinet, senators and representatives in congress.

Throughout this scene the demeanor of the multitude was that of interested expectancy. The attraction responsible for the assembly of so vast a throng was demonstrated by the tremendous burst of applause which heralded the president's approach.

Taking as a signal the arrival of Mrs. Roosevelt and a party of friends, and a moment later of Vice President Fairbanks and his escort, the applause subsided to await the coming of the man of the hour. Suddenly the crowd on the stand began to cheer. This was taken up by those immediately in front of the platform. The military presented arms, the committees uncovered, and soon the great sea of people was waving hats and flags and shouting itself hoarse.

President Roosevelt came forth from between the massive pillars quietly and composedly. He was escorted by Chief Justice Fuller. With measured tread in harmony with the dignified step of the chief justice, the president advanced in state down the long aisle of distinguished guests. By this time all were standing and nothing could be heard above the roar of thunderous welcome. Immediately following came, arm in arm, the members of the committee on arrangements. As the president passed down the aisle he bowed his head and with characteristic sweep of his hat bowed in acknowledgement of the salutations from the stand and the ovation from the people. While he waited for the applause to die out he stood in triumph, with no show of vanity, with no evidences of political enmity, apparently no memories of the campaign gone by, and nothing more disconcerting than a huge gathering of loyal Americans.

At a sign from Chief Justice Fuller the clerk of the supreme court stepped forward, holding a Bible. A hush fell over the crowd. The president raised his right hand and the oath to support the laws and constitution of the United States was reverently taken amid deep silence. When this had been concluded there was practically no demonstration and the president began his inaugural address. As soon as he finished speaking he re-entered the capitol, and as he disappeared within the building a signal was flashed to the navy yard and the roar of twenty-one guns was begun in official salute to the president.

Most Important

In buying food-articles, you must consider several things: Economy, Results, Easy Handling, Reliability; but the most important is Health.

Health means everything. In clothes, furniture, etc., if the buyer gets a poor or imitation article, the only harm is loss of money. In buying food-articles, if imitations are supplied, there is a loss of money, and probably an injury to health—which is beyond price.

Remember these facts when buying

THE NEW LAWS

Will Not Be in Effect For Several Months.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 4.—The new laws, with the exception of those having emergency clauses will not go into effect for two or three months, or until they are printed and officially promulgated by the secretary of state by sending them to the various circuit clerks of the state. This will give plenty of time for the office seekers in providing berths for the aspiring both state and local. The tip has gone out, however, that Governor Hanly will exercise much independence in selecting men for the positions created and that in many instances he will confer appointments on those who have in no sense been applicants for consideration.

Mutterings are being heard over the failure of the senate to pass the Guirli anti-trust bill and threats are being made that the majority will be held responsible before the people for this action. Campaign thunder by the barrel has been furnished the minority which has been represented by so few members that it has hardly had a chance to express its opinions. The session has been characterized, however, by exceptional good feeling between the majority and minority side, but few outbreaks having occurred as a result of alleged attempts to throttle the will of the Democratic members. On the majority side there has been considerable dissension and at times the outlook was for a general outbreak. This condition was manifested the more prominently when the Moore temperance bill was up.

F. A. Cotton, state superintendent of public instruction, will not get the assistant that he asked for. For twenty-five years, this office has had no increase in its working force and Superintendent Cotton asked for a traveling deputy whose duty it should be to supervise work in township high schools and to further the teaching of agriculture in the district schools. The measure passed the senate but was killed in the house.

The usual bills to appropriate money to the secretary and assistant secretary of the senate and the principal clerk in the house for the completion of their respective journals have been introduced but for the first time in many years there is danger that they will not pass. In the house the bills have been referred to the Ways and means committee and Chairman Sayre is known to be opposed to large appropriations.

While the governor has the right to refuse for consideration bills which are passed within three days of the close of the session he notified the chairman of the two houses that he would not enforce this rule but would, on the other hand, give due consideration to all measures finally passed up to this evening. This enabled the adoption of numerous measures which would, otherwise, have been lost in the shuffle.

Business Well in Hand.

Washington, March 4.—The last day's session of the house before the final adjournment of the 58th congress found that body almost through with its work of disposing of conference reports on the great supply measures of the government and a few measures of more or less importance. The senate found itself far less pressed than usual on the last day of a session of congress. All the appropriation bills having been passed, the session was given up largely to a general legislation and conference reports on appropriation bills.

Editor Was Acquitted.

Winamac, Ind., March 4.—C. W. Riddle, editor of the Winamac Republican, has been acquitted of the charge of criminal libel after one of the hardest legal contests ever witnessed in the Pulaski circuit court. The case was tried before a jury, occupying two days. The complaint was filed by Geo. O. Burson of this city. The trouble arose over the publication in the Republican of an account of a fight in a saloon on Christmas eve.

Delinquent Subscribers Sued.

St. Louis, March 4.—The Louisiana Purchase Exposition company has filed suits in justice courts against 122 subscribers to its stock, claiming that part or all of the amounts subscribed remain unpaid.

The state Senate concluded that $2000 was enough money to spend in going after "cigarette" Baker, and cut the appropriation down to that amount.

The inaugural ceremonies at Washington today were witnessed by a vast crowd of people, as these ceremonies always are. Indiana was fairly well represented.

IF YOU want to see how statesmen act when business is over with them attend the legislature next Monday. The last day is usually as interesting as a circus performance.

THE friends of the bill to regulate private banks scored a big victory despite the bankers lobby. It is hard to understand why bankers should be opposed to the bill in its present form.

LINCOLN DIXON, who succeeds Marion Griffith in Congress, has been in Washington several days getting used to the ways of the statesmen and witnessing the festivities that go along with the inauguration week.

Vaccination.

The Supreme Court of the United States, Justice Harlan delivering the opinion, has recently held that a Massachusetts statute requiring compulsory vaccination is clearly within the police powers of a state, and beyond the power of the Federal courts to review. The claim was made on the part of the objecting citizen that the statute was in contravention of his personal liberty, inasmuch as it compelled him to undergo a process to which he objected—an assault on his person, in fact—and in which he had no faith as a preventive against the scourge of smallpox.

This decision is one of much importance and settles a question that has been agitated for years.

Roof Garden Church.

In the circuit court at Columbus Friday a judgment against the much advertised roof garden church of that city was given in favor of Willis L. Barnes of Indianapolis. The amount demanded was $7000 and the judgment will nearly reach that figure. The property may be sold within a few days to satisfy the judgment. What steps the congregation will take to hold the property by payment of the judgment has not been made public. The debt against the church has been hanging over it ever since it was built.

Wesley Brotherhood.

The young men of the German M. E. church have organized a "Wesley Brotherhood" with 28 charter members, the object of which is self-improvement and the welfare of the church.

At their meeting last night in the church a constitution was adopted which is promising for the future of the organization.

Their regular meetings are to be held on the third Friday of each month. The officers elected are L. Edmund Huber, president; Benj. F. Schneek, vice president; Geo. Dahlenburg secretary and treasurer.

Gillespie Trial.

The trial of Belle Seward, Mrs. Carrie Barbour and Myron Barbour, jointly indicted with James Gillespie, now serving a life sentence for the murder of his twin sister, Elizabeth, will be called next Monday, the first day of the March term of the Ohio county court, before Special Judge Nicholas Cornet.

It is thought the defense will ask for a continuance on account of the appeal to the Supreme court by James Gillespie, who was convicted last January.

New Administration.

At 12:15 today Hon. Chas. W. Fairbanks took the oath of office as vice president to serve four years and at 1 o'clock the oath was administered to President Roosevelt to succeed himself for four years. The new senators were sworn in at 12:30.

THE LEGISLATURE

Gossip About the Doings of the Indiana Law-makers.

Senator Ganiard's private banking bill passed the House Friday over the opposition of a stubborn lobby. The bill provides that by July 1st, all private bankers in Indiana shall file with the State Auditor a statement showing the name of the bank, location, capital stock, a copy of articles of co-partnership and a statement of net worth together with the name of the person in charge. Such banks must have a capital stock of at least $10,000. Two sworn reports must be made annually.

The Senate bill giving the osteopaths one member on the state medical board has passed the House and goes to the Governor for his approval or disapproval.

Representative Howe's bill, which prohibits boys under sixteen years old and girls under seventeen from attending dances in public halls has passed both houses.

The Governor has signed the bill which prohibits a man from serving as juror in a mayor's or justice's court oftener than once in six months.

The legislature has provided for the printing of 4,000 copies of the report of the Fish Commissioner and Game Warden.

If the amended bill to regulate the salaries of county assessors becomes a law, the salary of the Jackson county Assessor will be $850.

The 64th session of the General Assembly of Indiana will close Monday at midnight. No bills will be passed after today. Governor Hanly will have all he can do until the adjournment without the passage of bills Monday.

Pleased With N. Dakota.

Nicholas Burkhardt returned from North Dakota yesterday afternoon. He is very well pleased with the country, having bought and homesteaded 320 acres. He says there are a great many landseekers going there now. Mr. Burkhardt says that during his stay of eleven days in Hettinger county the weather was fine, and the day he left the thermometer stood 70 above zero. He brought back a sample of soil from the land he bought.

Illinois Won.

In the annual debate between the University of Indiana and the University of Illinois held at Urbana, Illinois, Friday night the Illinois debaters scored a victory over the Indiana men. The judges scored Illinois two points and Indiana one. Ship subsidy was the question debated. The judges were Judge Oscar H. Montgomery of Seymour, Judge Brown of Chicago and Prof. Scott of the University of Michigan.

Southern Indiana Hotel.

The engineers of the Southern Indiana Railway have surveyed the land recently purchased at Trinity Springs and the survey has been made from a point on that railway to these springs where a large hotel will be erected by the Southern Indiana Hotel Company, which is composed of the stockholders of the Southern Indiana Railway Company. The hotel will be built of Bedford limestone and will be one of the most substantial and beautiful structures in the country and absolutely fire proof.

PEACE WARRANT.

A Young Woman Asks the Protection of the Court.

Charles McNichols, a young man whose father lives in Jennings county a few miles from Scioto, was arrested here Friday afternoon by Marshal Prewitt on a surety of peace warrant sworn to by Miss Ivy Carpenter who is a daughter of Geo. W. Carpenter, residing near Uniontown. The affidavit alleges that McNichols has written threatening letters recently to Miss Carpenter. It is alleged that he said in one of the letters that he would give her thirty days to make up her mind to marry him and that if she rejects him she will be in danger and that the property of her father and brother may be destroyed. It is alleged that three letters have been received.

McNichols enters a general denial, stating that he has not been writing any letters to Miss Carpenter and knows nothing about them. His trial is set for March 8, at 1 o'clock and he has retained S. A. Barnes to defend him.

This arrest brings to mind an occurrence back in 1899. Sometime during that year some one fired a shot through the window at Geo. W. Carpenter's home and it was believed that the shot was fired at Miss Ivy Carpenter. The grand jury investigated and an indictment was returned against Chas. McNichols charging him with firing that shot. He went away and avoided arrest. He returned to this vicinity last summer and was not molested though the indictment still stands against him.

McNichols says he has received some letters from Miss Carpenter, but she denies writing him. He says went to call on her last summer and that both she and her brother shot at him and he ran.

The case is a peculiar one and will attract considerable attention.

Woolen Mill Officers.

There was a meeting of the directors of the Seymour Woolen Factory Company Saturday forenoon in the office at the mill. John Oesting was elected a director to succeed the late Hon. Louis Schneek. F. P. Schmitt was elected president of the Company to succeed Mr. Schneek and Ben F. Schneek was elected vice president and general manager. There will be no change of policy in the management of the business, which was remarkably successful under the management of Mr. Schneek.

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS

Indiana's Dignified Political Leader Was Today Inducted Into Office of Vice President.

Imposing Ceremonies Attend the Formal Acceptance of the Great Gift of the People.

Washington, March 4.—In the presence of as many of his fellow citizens as could be crowded into the senate chamber, Charles Warren Fairbanks was at high noon today inducted into the office of vice president of the United States. The ceremony was quickly followed by the final adjournment of the senate of the 58th congress.

CHARLES W. FAIRBANKS.

gress, the beginning of a special session, an address by the vice president and the swearing into office of almost a third of the membership of the senate. All these official acts took place in the chamber just before the inauguration of the president and were in reality, while themselves of great importance, the prelude of the more important event. The installation of the new vice president was severely simple, and as brief as simple. It consisted of a promise, solemnly made with uplifted hand and bowed head, to perform the duties of the office and to support and defend the constitution of the United States. This was the oath of office, and it was administered by Senator Frye as president pro tempore of the senate. The two officials stood confronting each other on the elevated platform on which rests the desk of the presiding officer of the senate, practically on the same spot on which all the incoming vice presidents for the past fifty years have stood, and where a majority of American freemen have decreed that Mr. Fairbanks shall preside for the four years to come. Plain and democratic though the ceremony was, it attracted to the senate a gathering of notable people, many of them of such importance that, in accordance with time-honored custom, their appearance was heralded with pomp sufficient to atone for the simplicity of the official acts of the occasion, if not to quite overshadow them. These guests included the foremost representatives of the official life of the capitol city, foreign and domestic, civil and military, and also many other persons of prominence from all parts of the country.

On the senate floor, with his cabinet, were the president of the United States, himself about to be inaugurated; the diplomatic corps, the supreme court of the United States, the house of representatives, the admiral of the navy, the lieutenant general of the army, the governors of states, and others distinguished by reason of position or achievement. These sufficed to tax the capacity of that part of the hall, and they were splendidly supplemented and surrounded by the attendance in the galleries, consisting in large part of the wives, relatives and friends of the men who occupied seats below, many of them as distinguished in private and social life as the others in the public service.

The section of the gallery usually devoted to the private use of senators was today entirely surrendered to what may be called the executive party, and was occupied by the families and immediate friends of the president and the vice president and of the members of the supreme court and the cabinet. The front row of seats on one side of this section was filled by the members of the president's household, and the corresponding row on the other side by those of the vice president's, Mrs. Roosevelt and the wife and mother of Vice President Fairbanks being prominent among them.

Senator Fairbanks was escorted by the committee on arrangements to the platform on which sat President Pro Tempore Frye and Speaker Cannon, the former of whom was on the eve of performing the last act of his present term in that office by administering the oath which made Mr. Fairbanks not only vice president, but also the permanent presiding officer of the senate.

Senator Frye does all things with promptness and decision. The two official timepieces were agreed in proclaiming the hour of 12, when, according to the requirements made and provided the 58th congress must come to a close, the 59th congress be started on its career, and the new presiding officer introduced and installed. Mr. Frye had already said farewell; the visitors were in their seats. Not a moment was lost. Rising in front of the slender but towering form of his successor, the president pro tempore

The Emperor's Decision.

St. Petersburg, March 4.—The emperor has issued a rescript to the minister of the interior stating that he has decided to convene an assembly of elected representatives of the people to elaborate and consider legislative measures. Whatever the result may be, the document is sure to mark an epoch in Russian history as important if not more important than the signing of the emancipation manifesto, the twenty-fourth anniversary of which it was intended to signalize.

repeated to him in the form of an official oath the few impressive words which transformed the Indiana leader from the position of a senator to that of vice president of the United States. The ceremony did not consume to exceed two minutes of time, but it was conducted with such dignity and solemnity as to make a lasting impression on all present. Profound stillness characterized the dense assemblage while it was in progress, none present apparently failing to appreciate that an act of special national import was being performed. The oath concluded, the two leading participants shook hands cordially, and Mr. Frye spoke a few hurried words of congratulation, and then took his seat to listen with other senators to the address of the new vice president.

The address received careful attention, and at its conclusion the vice president instructed the secretary of the senate to read the president's call for an extraordinary session of the senate. Organization of the senate was then completed by the swearing in of senators elected to serve for the next six years. This ceremony concluded the day's session and the senate adjourned to the outside platform to witness with others the inauguration of President Roosevelt.

DEADLY COLLISION

Two Inauguration Specials From Cleveland Come Together.

Pittsburg, March 4.—In a rear-end collision last night between two special passenger trains from Cleveland on the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad en route to Washington, six men and one woman were killed and twenty other passengers injured.

The accident happened at Clifton station, eight miles west of Pittsburg, and was caused by the first special stopping to repair a hot box. The second train followed so closely that the flagman had no time to get back far enough to prevent the collision.

The first train carried a battalion of the Ohio engineers. It was made up of six coaches and a baggage car. The second train with the same number of cars carried the Tippecanoe club of Cleveland with a band and twenty-five or thirty women.

When the crash came the passengers in the rear car of the first train were the principal sufferers, and all of the fatalities were in that car. The wreckage took fire from the locomotive and the entire first train and three cars of the second were burned.

The dead: Captain William R. Hendry, battalion surgeon and a prominent Cleveland physician; Lieutenant Donaldson C. Schofield of Company D, a Cleveland architect; Corporal James Kehoe of Company C; Private H. R. Held of Company C; James Gray, negro cook, Battery B; Frank Pinney, aged ten years, son of Lieutenant O. C. Pinney; C. T. Scott, Pullman conductor.

Motive Is a Mystery.

San Francisco, March 4.—Although every effort is being made to find a motive for the reported poisoning of Mrs. Jane Stanford, and to fix the guilt, if such a crime has been committed, no arrests have yet been made, and those engaged in investigating the case decline to discuss the matter pending the completion of their work.

INAUGURALS.

Some Changes Since the First One in 1789.

Mr. Norman Haggood makes an interesting comparison between the times of President Washington's and President Roosevelt's inaugurations, and among other things says:

The inaugural this week unfolds far other sights and a far different leader. When the first President was inaugurated, the city which was to bear his name was in the womb of time. When John Adams entered it, it consisted of half finished edifices lying in a wilderness. Firewood was scarce, because none could be found to cut the trees. The spot was beautiful, but wild. Savages and beasts still lurked among the thickets, and from the adjoining hill the wide view swept over distances unknown to civilized man. Today this capital of an immense and powerful race, this fairest city swarms with Americans from vast western regions, which then no white man's eye had seen. It is dotted, also, here and there, on the occasion of the twenty-sixth President's inauguration, with people of dusky hue and varied garb, tokens of an empire undreamed of when Washington was alive.

Conditions changing have altered profoundly the premises on which the philosophy of that day was based. It assumed remoteness from the other world as the essential of our position. Now we reach that world as easily as Washington came from Boston to New York. We speak to Europe more quickly than Washington could get a message from one wing of his army to another. Changing facts have meant changing policies, and yet in spirit the philosophy of 1789 guides our steps today. Could Washington be deposited in the city of his name, he would draw no quick conclusions. Haste was no ingredient of his nature. He would learn whether the eighty million people who had spread across his continent were happy, as this world goes. He would decide whether they were virtuous, in man's small way, and I think he would conclude that the country had done well with the inheritance which he left.

Birthday Party.

Miss Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Boxmann, entertained several of her friends last night at her home on W. Jackson street. WOMEN WHO SUFFER

Listen to What Dr. Hartman Proposes to Do for You Without Charge.

Doubtless hundreds of thousands of women all over the United States have seen Dr. Hartman's offer in the papers—how he has undertaken to treat every woman suffering with any form of female disease who will write to him, free of charge.

To those who have not heard of this it may be said that Dr. Hartman is a physician and surgeon of great renown in medical circles, especially in the treatment of those diseases which women alone have to bear.

He has arranged to answer all letters that are sent to him from women troubled with any form of female weakness, free of charge, giving the benefit of knowledge which has cost him forty years to accumulate.

The medicines he prescribes are within the reach of any woman, and she can get them at any drug store.

All she is required to do is to send her name and address, together with her symptoms, duration of sickness and age. Address Dr. S. B. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Senator Roach, of Larimore, N. Dak.; Mrs. Senator Warren, of Cheyenne, Wyo.; Belva Lockwood and Mrs. General Longstreet, of Washington, D. C., are among the prominent ladies who indorse Peruna.

Miss Helen Rolof, Kaukauna, Wis., writes:

"Several times during the past two years or more my system has been greatly in need of a tonic, and at those times Peruna has been of great help in building up the system, restoring my appetite and securing restful sleep."

Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, writes as follows:

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Miss Lucy M. Riley, 33 Davenport St., Cleveland, Ohio, writes:

"I wish to add my indorsement to thousands of other women who have been cured through the use of Peruna. I suffered for five years with severe backache, and when weary or worried in the least I had prolonged headache. I am now in perfect health, enjoy life and have neither an ache or pain, thanks to Peruna."—Lucy M. Riley.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

The Effective Remedy

WASHINGTON, Iowa, April 4, 1905.

I was troubled for over a year with so scanty a flow that it was virtually suppression. A heavy cold superinduced this condition and nothing I could do seemed to help me. The only effective remedy I ever found was Wine of Cardui. Within two weeks I felt the good effects of the medicine and after I had used 13 bottles in all I was as healthy and regular as any woman could wish to be.

My sister used it while expecting to become a mother and found that it made childbirth comparatively easy and after the child was born she found that it helped her to regain her strength.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria street, Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the council." This remedy is for sale by C. W. Milhous.

LOBBY DEFEATED

Private Bankers Couldn't Exert Their Influence on the House.

BY A VOTE OF 53 TO 44

On the First Vote There Was Not a Constitutional Majority but the Friends of Bill Rallied.

Senate Cuts Down House Appropriation of $5,000 to Chase Bondholders.

Indianapolis, March 4.—In spite of the opposition of a powerful lobby, the house late yesterday afternoon passed the bill on private banking. During the morning session a vote was taken on the measure, but only forty-eight votes were cast for it to forty-three against it. Three more votes were needed to pass the measure by the required constitutional majority. Private bankers in large numbers were in the lobby and their presence had much to do in influencing members to vote against the measure.

In the afternoon the supporters of the bill rallied their forces by sending out for absent members, and when the vote came the bill was carried by 53 to 44. The private bankers who had fought the bill are saying that it will be a dead letter on the statute books. Their bitter fight, they admit, was made in the hope that there would be no private banking legislation at this session. With the bill as now passed inadequate to meet present conditions, the private bankers are satisfied, apparently. The bill required private bankers to capitalize with a capital stock of $10,000 and to report the condition of their business to the auditor of state at least three times each year.

In the senate yesterday the matter of accepting the house's amendment to the appropriation bill, appropriating $5,000 to carry on the investigation of bribery charges and the prosecution of bribery, resulted in a bitter arraignment of Representative Ananias Baker, who accused O. A. Baker, the lobbyist for the American Tobacco company, with having attempted to offer him a bribe of $100 to vote against the anti-cigarette bill. A number of the senators declared him equally guilty with Baker the lobbyist. Others defended his action. The senate amended the house's action by voting to make the $5,000 appropriation cover the cost of the investigation of all cases of alleged bribery and to apprehend all corrupt lobbyists. This item in the general appropriation bill must now go back to the house for concurrence.

The senate concurred in the amendments to the cities and towns bill made in the house. The measure is expected to go to Governor Hanly today.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT
William Cook Must Pay Penalty for Sanderson's Murder.

Bluffton, Ind., March 4.—William Cook, charged with the murder of Preston Sanderson at Hartford City last October, was found guilty of murder in the first degree and his punishment was fixed at life imprisonment. The jury was unanimously for conviction on the first ballot. Cook's attorneys made a motion for a new trial.

Cook, with five others, including his brother, Otto Cook; his sister, Mrs. Sanderson, widow of the murdered man; her daughter, Clara Smith, and Ernest Sanderson, half-brother of the Cooks, was indicted for the murder of Preston Sanderson, who disappeared last October. His body was found a week later in a pond, with two bullets in the brain. Samuel Emery, a sixth person accused, obtained his freedom by turning state's evidence. The others indicted will not be tried this term of court.

Gillespie Case Again.
Rising Sun, Ind., March 4.—The cases against Belle Seward and Mr. and Mrs. Myron Barbour, jointly indicted with James Gillespie, growing out of the assassination of Elizabeth Gillespie, for which Gillespie is under conviction and has been sentenced for life, will be called Monday next in the Ohio circuit court, but a continuance may be asked by the defense because of the appeal of Gillespie to the supreme court. There is also an indictment against Mr. Barbour for alleged perjury, which also may be tried during the March term.

Costly Fire at Monroe.
Decatur, Ind., March 4.—Fire which is supposed to have been of incendiary origin started in the meat market of J. C. Andrews at Monroe, six miles south of this city and destroyed six stores, causing a loss of $10,000. The buildings were all frames and burned rapidly. The insurance will cover half the loss.

His Action a Mystery.
Brazil, Ind., March 4.—Alexander McCallum, aged seventy-two years, committed suicide by shooting himself through the heart. He left a note bidding his relatives good-by, but gave no reason for the self-destruction. He was in the best of health, and his action is a mystery.
